Equity Through Education

“When a woman is educated, she unlocks not only her own power but the potential of entire communities. Education isn’t just a right — it’s the foundation of equity, the engine of the opportunity, and the key to a future where every woman can thrive.”

Gloria L. Blackwell, AAUW CEO

AAUW’s story began in 1881, when a small group of female college graduates banded together to open the doors for women’s career advancement and to encourage more women to pursue higher education. And now, 144 years later, our robust belief that high quality public education is the foundation of a democratic society and the key to improving economic prosperity and gender equity, is under assault. Public education is underfunded. Teachers are underpaid and disrespected, most recently by federal government decisions to remove advanced degrees in education as a category of professional degrees. Curricula are changed to present an idyllic view of history. DEI is eliminated and demonized. Books are banned. Academic freedom at colleges and universities has been threatened. Title IX enforcement has waned. Aggressive efforts have been taken to dismantle and then eliminate the United States Department of Education.

In 2026 we are truly On the Front Lines: Defending Education and Equity for Women and Girls. Come to our 101st State Conference and hear from an exciting array of excellent speakers!

Keynote Address

ON THE FRONT LINES: Defending Education and Equity for Women and Girls

Virginia State Senator Schuyler T. VanValkenburg (District 16)

When we gather in Glen Allen on April 18, 2026—14 miles from the State Capitol in Richmond—we will physically be in the Virginia Senate 16th District, covering parts of Western Henrico County, and represented by State Senator Schuyler T. VanValkenburg. We will also be 5.4 miles from Glen Allen High School, where, for the past 15 years, the Senator has taught History and United States Government. As the only public school teacher in the Virginia Senate, Senator VanValkenburg is uniquely qualified to address the state of public education in the Commonwealth as a professional practitioner, as well as an elected policymaker.

Senator Schuyler VanValkenburg is a father of three and grew up in Johnstown, New York, where he went to public schools, graduating high school in 2000. He went on to the University of Richmond, graduated in 2004 and found his new home in Henrico County, Virginia. The next year, in 2005, he started teaching at a middle school in the Henrico County Public Schools. During that time, he pursued a master's degree at Virginia Commonwealth University in History, which he completed in 2008.

In 2017, the Senator expanded his role as a public servant and ran for the 72nd District seat in the Virginia House of Delegates. He won and went on to serve three terms in the House of Delegates, from 2018 through 2023. In 2023, he was elected to the Virginia State Senate. He serves on the Senate Committees of Education & Health, Privileges & Local Government, General Laws, and Rehabilitation & Social Services.

During Senator VanValkenburg's tenure in the Virginia General Assembly, he has championed many of the issues that are priorities for AAUW. As a delegate in the 2020 session, he was one of the patrons of the ERA in the House of Delegates when it was ratified. As the only public school teacher in the Senate and Chair of the Subcommittee on Public Education, Senator Van Valkenburg is committed to investing in our public school system to ensure that it has the resources for every student to succeed and to attract talented teachers. He also specializes in legislation to make it easier for Virginians to access their right to vote and serves as the Chair of the Joint Subcommittee to Study the Consolidation and Scheduling of General Elections. Besides elections and education legislation, Senator VanValkenburg champions legislation to address the affordable housing shortage, to increase the production of clean, affordable energy, and to better regulate social media companies, especially to protect minors.

In December of 2025, he was appointed Chair of the Senate Committee of Rehabilitation & Social Services. In response to this appointment, Senator VanValkenburg said, "This committee touches the lives of Virginians in a deeply personal way. From child and family support, to aging services and community wellbeing. I'm committed to ensuring our policies reflect our values and expand opportunities across the Commonwealth."

We are honored that Senator VanValkenburg will welcome us to Glen Allen, deliver the keynote address to kick-off our conference, and answer some of our questions.

Farmville: Birthplace of America's Student-Led Civil Rights Revolution

Leah Brown, Associate Director of Education and Collections, Robert Russa Moton Museum

No discussion of public education in the Commonwealth of Virginia in 2026 is complete without traveling back in time to Farmville, in Prince Edward County, Virginia, in 1951. That's when the student body of the all-black Robert Russa Moton High School, which now houses a museum and National Historic Site, under the leadership of student Barbara Johns, "...walked out in protest of unequal educational facilities." This "...launched a thirteen-year court battle to achieve educational equality...." The resulting school desegregation lawsuit, "Davis v. Prince Edward, was the only student-initiated case of the five cases that comprised the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Brown v. Board of Education." In Brown, the court overturned its 1896 decision in Plessy v. Ferguson and concluded that "in the field of public education the doctrine of separate but equal has no place." However, there were some school districts in Virginia that defied the Supreme Court and demonstrated "massive resistance", i.e., they closed public schools instead of desegregating them. “At the local level, Prince Edward County was the only county in the nation to close its schools for five years, between 1959 and 1964, rather than desegregate. In Griffin v. County School Board of Prince Edward County, the Supreme Court intervened again to reopen the schools.” Leah Brown, Associate Director for Education and Collections, for the Moton Museum, will use the Moton High School story as a case study to discuss the Supreme Court’s role in preserving public education and desegregating schools.

Challenges and Opportunities in Education for Promoting Student Equity and Success

Alexander Blocker, Senior Organizer
Legal Aid Justice Center

LaRhonda Johnson Horton
Dean of Retention and Student Success
Virginia Peninsula Community College

The AAUW Strategic Priorities call us to action with these words: “In a time of growing challenges to education access, AAUW must meet this moment.” This panel is designed to help us meet this moment. Although the list of challenges to education is long and daunting, we need to identify and understand them, find the opportunities, and then get to work.

Our panel brings together two professionals, who are no strangers to AAUW, to get us ready for the task. Our first speaker is Alex Blocker from the Legal Aid Justice Center. Like AAUW-VA, the Center is a member of the Fund Our Schools coalition. “Fund Our Schools is a statewide coalition of organizations and individuals who believe that every child in every zip code across the Commonwealth of Virginia should have access to a high-quality public education.” Alex joined us in Richmond in January 2025 to brief us before we set off around the General Assembly Building for our Lobby Day. In April, he’ll provide an overview of K-12 education funding in Virginia, including the impact of federal cuts and policy changes actions the Commonwealth has taken in response. Our second speaker is Dean LaRhonda Johnson Horton from Virginia Peninsula Community College, who will focus on the challenges facing higher education through the prism of a community college. She’ll also discuss the impact of federal cuts and policy changes on her institution and how they are moving forward. Dean Johnson Horton was the well-received speaker at the October 2025 AAUW-VA Southeast District meeting about “Empowering Equity Through Education,” and she is a new member of our Hampton Branch.

AAUW-VA Mini-Grants: No Need to Reinvent the Wheel

Anita Booth and Sue Christie, Members of the Falls Church Area Branch Program Planning Committee

Healing the Gender Divide in an Era of Pervasive Social Media

Janet Hedrick, President, Fredericksburg Area Branch
*Human Trafficking Awareness

Sally Daniel, President, Virginia Beach Branch

Women's Fight for the Vote – Showing Iron Jawed Angels to Community Members

Every year, for over a decade, the AAUW-VA State Board has allocated funds for mini-grants to support branch proposals for projects that promote AAUW's public policy priorities. These mini-grants provide seed money for innovative and tried-and-true projects. Over the years, branches have pursued a wide variety of projects supported with AAUW-VA mini-grants that have embodied our public policy priorities, and raised our visibility of and opportunities for recruitment for AAUW-VA. Mini-grant projects also have been used to promote and enhance diversity, equity and inclusion within AAUW and in the community. Our panelists will describe successful projects their branches have undertaken for which they received mini-grant support. Branches will come away with information on how they can apply for mini-grants for projects they are planning, as well as ideas for projects they might replicate in their communities.

The Conundrum of Remote Work for Women

Dr. Emma Harrington, Assistant Professor of Economics University of Virginia

How does remote work impact the labor market opportunities of women? Dr. Harrington will share with us her research that suggests that remote work's effects differ sharply by career stage. For young women, remote work has out-sized career costs. When working apart from their colleagues, young women receive much less mentorship --- suggestively because they are more reluctant to ask for it --- and, as a result, make less advantageous career moves. For more experienced women, however, remote work can be liberating. It enables them to focus more on their own projects and reduces the pressure to do some “non-promotable” tasks that often fall disproportioately on women. Moreover, evidence shows that remote work helps women persist in the workforce after becoming mothers, by allowing them to better balance career and family. This presentation will provide evidence on both sides of this debate and aim to spark a conversation about the nuanced consequences of remote work for women.

The Changing Nature of Virginia Politics: Reviewing the Pivotal 2025 Election and the First Session of Virginia's First Madam Governor

Dr. Stephen Farnsworth, Professor and Director, Center for Leadership and Media Studies, University of Mary Washington

The partisan tides go in and out in Virginia politics, a place where there are no permanent majorities and no permanent minorities. Dr. Farnsworth will discuss Virginia's pivotal 2025 election and what it says about the future of politics and public policy in Virginia. He will also share his views about the policy impact (so far) of Virginia's first Madam Governor, who came into office with a new Democratic political trifecta in Virginia - and the party's biggest majority in the House of Delegates in a generation.
